FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

December 15, 2009, Tuesday: Softly opening this week, Black Fox Lounge is a well-thought-out repose located in the heart of Dupont Circle, in the Northwest section of Washington, D.C. Fresh and contemporary yet possessing an Old World sensibility, it offers impeccable service in an atmosphere where one can relax, delight in simple pleasures, and if need be, transact business. Enjoy classic and original cocktails, boutique wines from luxury wineries around the world, and savory hors d'oeuvres in a conversation-friendly setting. On most evenings, Black Fox features intimate live performances by some of the most talented musicians in the area including piano and bass duets, guitar solos, and jazz vocals.

Proprietor James A. McGlade, a 30-year veteran in the hospitality industry, and a graduate of the Culinary Institute of America, Hyde Park, New York, worked with the area's most sought after and skilled consultants to conceive a contemporary lounge that caters to a refined customer living in or traveling to the District for commerce, politics or pleasure. The small plates food menu is comprised of delectable bites and fresh salads imagined by McGlade.

The narrow length of Black Fox Lounge is standard among historic buildings along Connecticut Avenue. Turning this architectural challenge into a virtue, three elongated murals salvaged from the bygone Circle Bar of the historic Watergate Hotel were installed. The triptych, by Karen Smith, depicts Edwardian scenes that play up the span of both space and time. Their scale accentuates the volume of the space while the subject recalls the Belle Époque, beautiful era.

A clean, straightforward and creative approach informed the design of the lounge. The concept is innovative but guided by classic principles. With an unfussy and warm color palette, the mood is chic yet inviting.

A black fox is a red fox in the rare color phase when its pelt is mostly black. It is seldom spied. Black Fox Lounge delivers a rare and bold combination of arcadian contentment in an urbane setting.
